Court in Moscow Convicts 2 U.S. Reporters of Libel

MOSCOW, July 18 (UPI) — A Soviet court today convicted two diction to order printing of any U.S. reporters on charges of libelsuch retraction." ing Soviet television officials and ordered them to pay fines equiva-lent to $1,047 each and publish retractions in either Soviet or U.S. newspapers.

The verdict followed a threehour trial that was boycotted by the defendants. Craig Whitney of The New York Times and Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun, both of whom are vacationing in the Unit-ed States. They said that they would return to Moscow when their vacations were finished. Chief Judge Lev Almazov of the Moscow City Court ordered that Mr. Whitney and Mr. Piper pay their fines within 10 days and publish the retractions within five days. He made no mention of a prosecution demand that the court also ask the Soviet Foreign Ministry to strip the two of accreditation.

Times Deplores Verdict

Seymour Topping, managing edi-tor of The New York Times, said that The Times deplored the ver-dict because it "implies that American reporters can be hauled into court at any time and penalized for reporting in a full and fair manner on events in the Soviet Union." He said that the newspaper will not tious reporting. We maintain that dents who said that, and they did.

The stories in question quoted Georgian dissident sources as saying that Soviet television officials had fabricated the filmed confession of Georgian dissident Zviad Gamsakhourdia to charges of anti-Soviet activities.

The television officials called Mr. Gamsakhourdia, 39 --- who is serving a three-year prison sentence as their key witness.

The prosecution alleged that Mr. Whitney and Mr. Piper virtually ig-nored such official Soviet sources as Tass and chose to believe what the prosecution called "unreliable dissident sources.

Slander, Prosecutor Says

"Whitney and Piper are slanderers, only interested in distorting Soviet reality," the prosecutor said.
Paul Banker, managing editor of the Baltimore Sun, said: "The conviction is what we expected, Piper was convicted the moment he was charged. We stand on the contention that the news article was cor-- that friends of the dissidents said they doubted the confession..."

"I don't know what the Russians mean by a retraction," said Mr. Banker. "I don't see bow we can do print a retraction of Mr. Whitney's that. We didn't say the dissidents accurate May 24 dispatch, which he said the television program was filed in good faith after conscien-

Whitney Unworried

Mr. Whitney said today that he was not worried about the convictions and intends to return to the Soviet Union on July 28. "As far as the verdict is concerned, I understand it requires a retraction," he said. "L as a correspondent, am not required to do that and it is something I will leave up to The New York Times to decide."

He said he was "certainly not" worried about the prospect of Soviet government retaliation when he returns, but added, when asked about the possibility of being expelled, "I don't know what the Russians will greet me with."

The verdict was considered cer-tain to strain U.S.-Soviet relations further, coming just five days after the sentencing of Soviet human rights activists Anatoli Shcharan-sky and Alexander Ginsburg. The Carter administration responded to the charges against the two by hinting that it might expel five Soviet reporters based in Washington.

No Miracles From Bonn Meeting

By Paul Lewis

BONN, July 18 (NYT) - Leaders of the industrialized nations hope that the outcome of this year's Bonn summit meeting will keep the flame of international economic cooperation burning, even if it also shows they have lowered their expectations about what these annual meetings can achieve.

The approach they adopted yesterday to the world's economic problems is essentially a cautious one, eschewing quick fixes and great expectations. It recognizes the complexity of current problems, the political constraints on democratic governments, and the impossibility of securing a dramatic

The outcome bears the hallmark of the West German chancellor, Helmut Schmidt, the meeting's host and chairman, who believes that the slow growth and high unemployment affecting so many coun-tries today cannot be reversed through the adoption of more reflationary economic measures alone.

Persistent Problems

Rather, in his view, these difficulties reflect deep-seated structural problems such as ootdated factories, increasing birthrates, and the emergence of efficient industrial producers in the developing world together with the damage to business confidence caused by high in-flation and unstable currencies.

The new recovery program for e Western world and Japan, by lack of precision on crucial points, shows that an increasing number of major industrial countries accept a large part of the West German view.

ner. Takeo puknda summed up this new mood of cantion among the leaders here today when he said: "We must not expect any miracles here. What we are after is simply that we should stop castigating one another and crincizing each other."

This cautious approach was in sharp contrast to last year's London summit meeting, at which Western leaders committed themselves to stimulatory economic policies in the stronger industrial countries, believing that they alone would bring higher economic

No Improvement

They were disappointed. West Germany and Japan sought and failed to get the higher growth their trade partners expected, and unemployment increased.

As expected, the U.S. contribution to yesterday's agreement took the form of a pledge in strengthen the dollar hy cutting oil imports. But President Carter made no commitment to act unilaterally if Congress continues to obstruct his conrvation plans. Mr. Schmidt, who has pressed for meaningful energy-saving in the United States, accepted this as a fact of U.S. political life. But Mr. Carter and other Western leaders also accepted that West Germany is not going to risk its low inflation rate hy any massive reflation of its moving again.

Mr. Schmidt announced a modest reflationary package that he was planning anyway, which will he equivalent to roughly 1 percent of gross national product. This is the same as the stimulatory package introduced last October with disappointing results. The actual impact may prove less this time, however, because part of the stimulus probably will be in investment incentives that companies may not take up, rather than in quick-acting Mr. Fukuda did not even promise to reduce Japan's $17 billion trade surplus, which depresses growth in other countries, and risk further increases in unemployment at home.

Instead, be offered to bold the volume of Japanese exports next year "at or below" this year's level through "the temporary and ex-traordinary step of calling for moderation of exports" and an emergency import program. Even these steps, be warned, might not be sufficient to correct "Japan's surplus problem."

Other participating countries were unable to make significant reflation pledges largely because most of them are still striving to their rates of inflation and their basic economic structure. Britain's prime minister. James

Egypt, Israel Split Sharply In U.K. Talks

LEEDS CASTLE, England, July 18 (AP) — Egypt and Israel sharply disagreed over the future of the Palesunians and the West Bank of the Jordan River at the opening of U.S.-sponsored Mideast peace talks

"I think the gap is still very wide." an Egyptian spokesman said, assessing the 3½-hour session hosted by U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

To ensure security, the talks are being held in a 13th-century castle, surrounded by a moat, 45 miles southeast of London.

"I think we are still waiting for a more positive response from the Israelis to our proposals," spokesman Hamdi Nada said.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter 3d said that the two foreign ministers, Moshe Day-an of Israel and Mohammed Ihrahim Kamel of Egypt, began the first round of exploratory talks with an examination of each country's position. "They did not evade the issues," Mr. Carter said.

Sadat Warning

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, however, warned that there would be no further meetings between Egyptian and Israeli representatives if Israel does not respond to Cairo's proposals at the talks,

Mr. Sadat's remarks, broadcast by Cairo radio, were made during a press conference in the Sudan, where be is to attend a two-day Afnican summit conference,

Despite these wide differences. Mr. Vance sees points of agreement between the two sides and is trying to build a basis for a settlement. A U.S. official said that the two sides have agreed that they want peace and that there should be a five-year transition period. The talks are designed to inspire continued negotiations after a six-month deadlock. Despite the gap over the West Bank and the Pales-tinians, the State Department is anticipating a successful outcome. It is making plans for Middle East troubleshooter Alfred Atherton in make calls this weekend in Egypt, Israel, Jordan and Saudi Arabia in an effort in lay the technical groundwork for more Egyptian-Israeli negotiations. But the Egyptian and Israeli spokesmen emphasized that wide differences still exist between their positions on the issues of the West Bank and the Palestinians,

The spokesmen disagreed on whether the talks with Mr. Vance represented a resumption of direct negotiations — the principal U.S. objective — and on whether there would be followup rounds after the two-day meeting here.

"I would certainly characterize the discussions as straight, direct negotiations," said Israeli spokesman Naftali Lavie. Mr. Nada, for the Egyptians, said that Mr. Kamel had been sent in response to Mr. Vance's invitation, "to see if there is a chance to proceed." So far, he said, "I don't think there is anything new we can Mr. Lavie agreed, "There is a wide gap, otherwise we would not be sitting here," be said, "Israel is very hopeful that we will be able to close or bridge this gap. How long it will take I do not know." Mr. Sadat cut short the negotiations between Mr. Dayan and Mr. Kamel in January because of a deadlock over the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, which Israel won in the 1967 war.

BP, Others Accused of Rhodesia Trade

Oil Scandal Looms in Britain

By Bernard D. Nossiter LONDON, July 18 (WP) - A major scandal is threatening to break here over charges that the government-owned British Petroleum Co. and five other oil giants have been violating the ban on trade with Rhodesia since the birth of lan Smith's illegal white regime 12 years ago.

An official inquiry into the alleged activity is now virtually completed, it was learned today. A report is to be given to Foreign Minster David Owen in a few weeks.

ners in the Rhodesian venture, al-ready have been surfacing here. Both companies refuse to affirm or deny the accuracy of these accounts. Both insist they will make no comment until Mr. Shell is owned by British and Dutch interests. About 51 percent of BP's shares are owned by the government, and a former Foreign Office chief, Lord Greenhill, sits on its board. One extensive version of the alleged sanctions breach has been published in the weekly New Statesman. It was written by Marun Bailey and Bernard Rivers, who are consultants to the Commonwealth Secretariat at the United Nations. A parallel story has been told by Jorge Jardim in his new book, "Sanctions Double-Cross." Mr. Jardim is a former Portuguese minister who was in charge of insuring Rhodesia's oil supplies from Mo-zamhique before that nation gained its independence.

Without oil, the Smith regime would almost certainly have collapsed years ago. Since the world trade in oil is dominated by seven large companies, often called "the seven sisters," it has long been evi-dent that at least some have been providing white Rhodesians with

The two published descriptions of the activity agree that the companies have carefully observed the division of the Rhodesian market that existed when Mr. Smith declared independence. The reports say it has been split, down to the decimal point, by BP and Shell act-ing as a unit; Caltex, a partnership Standard Oil of California and the Texas company; Mobil, and a subsidiary of Compagnie Francaise des Petroles.

'Eighth Sister'

After sanctions were imposed on hodesian trade in 1968 by the United Nations, companies are said to have worked through thinly disguised intermediaries to bring in their product. According to the Bailey and Rivers article, the most important conduit worked this from tankers docking at Lourenco Marques (now Maputo). Shell-Mozambique sold the oil to a specially created South African firm, Freight Services. This company then delivered the oil by rail to Genta, the Rhodesian purchasing agent.

That simple technique seems to have fooled the British Navy, which was blockading another Mozambique port, Biera, for nine years, threatening to intercept tankers that never came.

A variant of the scheme was de-scribed by Mr. Jardim, the ex-minister in the Salazar government. Under this arrangement, the French concern took over Shell's Rhodesian orders and placed a matching order with Shell.

Mr. Bailey and Mr. Rivers estimate that BP and Shell alone have supplied Rhodesia with about $190 million in oil products. Their share of the trade, the UN aides wrote, has held at a remarkably steady 42.5 percent. The New Statesman writers in-

Cuban Deaths On African Soil Put at 1,500

WASHINGTON, July 18 (AP) -The Cuhan army has lost about 1,500 men killed in Africa over the last three years, U.S. intelligence officials said today. The officials said the Cuban bat-

The officials, who refused to be

Nor, they said, can they confirm reports that Cuban wounded are being treated in Russian and East European hospitals rather than being sent home, where they might arouse popular concern.

The officials said about 1,000 Cuban troops were killed in Angola and 500 in Ethiopia. Cuban military elements are also present in about 10 other countries of Africa, principally as advisers and trainers of local forces, including those operating into Rhodesia.

California Man Paying Less, Donating More After Tax Cut

LOS ANGELES, July 18 (WP) — Despite Proposition 13, the tiny northern California towns of Marysville, Oliverhurst and Linda will bave fire departments in the coming year.

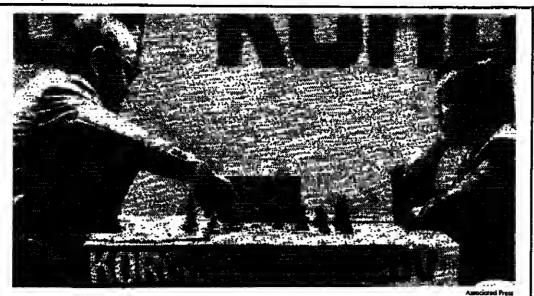

And the local senior citizens group in Yuba County will still get funds, along with a program designed to aid the handicapped. All the programs were scheduled to fold because their county funding was about to be cut under Proposition 13.

But last week Las Vegas businessman Marvin Kratter changed all that. As the owner of Yuba Goldfields Inc. in Marysville, Mr. Kratter saved $26,000 in county tax monies because of the property tax cuts mandated by the recently passed proposition.

Mr. Kratter decided that the community needed the money more than he did for his mining, dredging and home-bulding projects. He gave it back in the form of contributions to many of the organizations that were going to lose county funding. And he promised to do the same thing again next year.

"We feel a strong attachment and a community spirit commitment to the Yuba-Marysville community," Mr. Kratter said. "Although we are in favor of county government operated on an economical basis, we do not wish to benefit at this time by taking ndvantage of the unexpected savings from Proposition 13 to the serious detriment of many worthy community programs and organizations.

U.S. Airlines Headed For Record Year

WASHINGTON, July 18 (AP) U.S. airlines are heading for a record year and carried 16.3 percent more passengers in the first six months of this year than they did in the same period last year, the Air Transport Association reported

For the month of June, traffic was up 21.9 percent over last year, the association said. It forecast that U.S. airlines would carry a record 265 million travelers this year, compared with 240 million in 1977, which was a record. It attributed much of the traffic surge to the proliferation of discount fares.

6 Persons Slain In U.S. Robbery

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 18 (UPI) — Six employees of a restaurant here were found slain yester-day in what Police Chief Tom Heg-gy described as "probably the most horrendous crime ever committed in the Oklahoma City area." Robbery was the apparent motive.

Although money was left untouched in a cash register, more than $1,000 was taken from a safe, authorities said, and it was believed coins found outside the restaurant's back door may have been dropped by the killers.

What They Achieved in Bonn

The achievement of the Bonn meeting is that it kept matters from getting worse. That's not a bad thing to have managed. Perhaps that final communique, with its talk about cooperation and nteeting again next year, will not seem very exciting to you. But it's better than the alternative. The strains among these seven rich and powerful economies are real, and each of the seven men at Bonn could score a sharp advantage at home. at least briefly, by exploiting those strains as political issues. But each of the governments at Bonn remembers that there was a period, between the two world wars, when they let economic conferences turn out badly. The recollection of that catastrophe is the discipline that now keeps the seven together.

The seven governments are apprehensive about what is known as world opinion which, first of all, means the currency markets. The people who manage and invest large sums of money provide a running commentary, through the exchange rates, on countries' varying economic prospects. A lot of these people wanted some kind of assurance from Bonn that the governments were somehow going to try to stabilize the currency rates and make the markets safer. The message to the markets is that just as the United States has been saying all along, it really isn't possible any more. Before currencies become more stable, inflation rates will have to be brought down and trade deficits reduced. That subject leads to the subject of

The Bonn meeting was deeply interested in President Carter's energy bill for reasons that go well beyond energy. Abroad, the failure of the United States to put the president's policy into effect has seemed an ominous indication of a U.S. refusal to exercise even a modest degree of self-restraint in behalf of common interests. In response, Mr. Carter made a specific pledge. He intends to get the price of U.S. domestic oil up to world level by the end of 1980. For the consumer, at present prices, it would increase the price of sure. oil products about 5 cents a gallon.

But the entangled argument over how, or even whether, to do it has immobilized the central sections of the Carter energy plan in Congress. Mr. Carter's first choice is a tax on crude oil. But that oil-tax bill has been stuck fast in the Senate ever since it passed the House nearly a year ago. Mr. Carter's declaration in Bonn strengthens the impression that he has decided to give Congress until the end of the session to enact legislation. If it fails, the implication here is that he proposes to proceed under presidential authority. It is not clear precisely what route he has in mind. But the Bonn communique says that he is still determined to achieve the goals of his original bill, if not by the bill then by other

Each of the other six oations responded in kind. Crucial to all the rest, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt agreed to try to speed up West Germany's, and therefore Europe's, economic expansion.

The prevailing mood in Bonn was, evidently, one of caution. The seven politicians know that their economies are no longer predictably following the established and familiar patterns of the postwar decades. Since they have all been burned by recent economic surprises, caution is not necessarily an unreasonable posture for the present. All seven governments are oow uneasily coming to terms with the possibility that the last recession was not merely an unusually severe turn in the accustomed cycle. Perhaps, instead, it announced a new phase in the world's development — one in which, conceivably for quite a long time, economic growth will be slower and rises in the standard of living much harder to earn than in the long postwar boom that may now have ended.

The seven men at Bonn agreed to keep working together. They agreed to try to keep economic differences from turning into disruptive political issues. But they were trying not to promise more than they can deliver and how much they can deliver, they are not

Kremlin's Famous Last Words

The Soviet government has distributed a morbidly engrossing "anatomy of treason" to justify its most brutal persecution of a recent dissenter — Anatoli Shcharansky. The trouble began, it tells its people, when "he decided long ago to leave his homeland for the West." There is no mention that the "West" is Israel, and there is no mention that the world would never bave heard of him had he been allowed to leave. The pivotal lie in the mountain of lies on which this case rests is to be that be was not content to leave:

"But who needs [in the West] a 'green' specialist with an engineer's diploma when there are thousands and thousands of qualified engineers without jobs there? Shebaransky was not so silly as not to see this. The West needed a 'public figure' and the traitor was trying hard to appear such a figure before his foreign masters. The logic of betrayal threw this 'public figure' and 'champion of human rights' into the arms of special services, turned him into an ordinary spy . . . "

Shcharansky's crime, it is now plain, was that he refused to accept in silence the arbitrary rules that denied him exit from the Soviet Union but also denied him a livelihood for the sin of applying to leave. His protest that this violated the Helsinki accords on human rights is termed a "slander" of the Soviet Union. His introduction of other protesting technicians and scientists to a Western correspondent is said to have set them up for the reporter's prying into "all sorts of secret data." Out of "vanity" and a "desire for. the limelight" abroad, the Kremlin concludes incredibly, Sbcharansky became entrapped in a life of clandestine espionage.

These pathetic tales are not, of course, without purpose. Russians are duly warned not to befriend dissenters; dissenters are warned not to deal with foreign reporters; unhappy citizens are warned not to pine for emigration. But in all the motives ever discovered for spying, surely a thirst for fame is unique even in Soviet annals. Rarely, in fact, has one soul's unwanted fame so well defined a nation's infamy.

Perhaps the public has wearied of this af-

Koreagate: More to Come

After 18 months of investigating South Korea's bribery and influence-peddling on Capitol Hill, the House Ethics Committee has charged four members with violating House rules and exonerated the speaker and majority whip with a polite chiding for poor judgment. Is that all there is?

The generous Tongsun Park, a sort of ambassador with fat portfolio, has admitted to giving $850,000 to 30 members of the House, 13 of whom are still there. The committee has cleared all but five. It suspects perjury by one member or by the witnesses against him and by two former members beyond its reach. Its findings are separate from the actions of the Justice Department, which has convicted a Korean-born businessman of corrupting congressmen and lying to a grand jury; won an admission of fraudulent conspiracy from a former member of Congress: indicted another former member, and pursued charges against some lesser figures. Several other former congressmen appear to have been saved by the statute of limitations.

That may be it, the committee implies. Its effort to sort out criminal conduct from ethical malpractice and both of these from a loose handling of campaign cootributions and other favors seems to have been scrupulous. Its pursuit of a key witness, former Ambassador Kim Dong Jo. has been diligent but frustrated. Its desire to bring the matter to an end is understandable. But the matter cannot be left there.

On Carter, Castro and the CIA Data

By Abraham F. Lowenthal

WASHINGTON — The long-simmering debate in Washington about Cuba's role in Africa was brought to a furious boil by the recent Katangan invasion of Zaire's Shaba province. Now. weeks later, the controversy shows few signs of abaung.
"We believe," said President

Carter at a news conferenc io Chi-cago recently, "that Cuba had known of the Katangan plan to invade and obviously did oothing to prevent them from crossing the border. We also know that the Cubans have played a key role in training and equipping the Katan-gans who attacked."

Congresssiooal representatives immediately divided into skeptics and believers. The president, meanwhile, held his ground, citing as his authority information provided him by the CIA.

In fact, the issue of Cuban iovolvement in Africa is complex. The argument skips between analysis of Cuba's motives, their links to Soviet designs, the effect on U.S. interests, treods within Africa, and wider U.S.-Soviet rivalries.

all these troubling questions into one deceptively simple one: Did the Cubans actively participate in the recent iovasion of Zaire by exiled Katangan gendarmes?

Carter accuses Cuba of partial responsibility for the invasion, since it was lauoched from Angola where Cuba's presence and presumed influence are pervasive. On the other hand, Fidel Castro denies Cuban complicity in the invasion of Zaire. He claims that the incursion occurred despite Cuban efforts to dissuade the Katangans from launching a strike which be says Cuba opposed. Either Carter or

Castro is wrong,

For people outside the government, the debate has been frustrating. We have no particular reason to believe Castro, and perhaps even less reason to trust his Soviet patrons. Blind faith in the administration's interpretation seems equally unjustified, however, especially when responsible senators warn us that the administration's evidence is ambiguous and contradictory. Worse yet, the administration's own public stance shifts from one week to the next. None of us outside the government (and perhaps not even those within the ad-numistration itself) knows for sure with the idea that no one is in nunistration itself) knows for sure who is right about Cuba's role io charge.

In fact, it has been reported that eral times in the last few weeks, as I a straio has developed between the White House and the CIA over this whole episode: On the one hand, the intelligence agency claiming that Carter pressured it to reveal classified information that could have jeopardized sensitive sources; and the other hand the White House alleges that the CIA exag-gerated the Cuban role and failed to provide hard evidence to support agency claims.

It may be worth remembering, that previous presidents of the United States have been known to go before the public with erroneous assessments based on fragmentary intelligence reports.

Some critics of the administra-tion have cited the 1964 Tonkin Gulf incident to make this point. In that case, however, President Johnson was probaby less mistaken than he was Machiavellian, choosing to frame distant events within a selfserving interpretation.

A more relevant example faulty intelligence evaluation is the Dominican crisis of 1965. Although no one seriously believes that President Johnson completely fabricated the potential Communist takeover in Santo Domingo and to which he responded by sending in U.S. roops, most observers would agree in retrospect that the president's evaluation of U.S. intelligence reports was wrong.

Instructive

The facts of the Dominican case are instructive: Impressed by embassy reports that a military coup in Santo Domingo and Communist involvement with the victorious "rebels" might produce a "second Cuba" in the Caribbean, Johnson ordered U.S. Marines to land at Santo Domingo on April 28, 1965. On April 29, with intelligence reports streaming into Washington conference of the House and Sen-about alleged Communist activities are should take place late this in Santo Domingo, the president month or early next month, ordered in the 82d Airhorne Division. in the Dominican Republic, one every six minutes around the clock. Soon, nearly 23,000 U.S. troops pairolled Santo Domingo, almost half as many as were then serving in Vietnam. Explaining this major intervention to the U.S. people on May 2, the president declared that what began as a popular demo-cratic revolution very shortly moved and was taken over and reseized and placed in the hands of a band of Communist conspirators."

No one can say why Johnson chose to present his conclusioo with this byperbole. We do know, however, that the president had the benefit of various intelligence reports and assessments, some of which Johnson could reasonably have interpreted as supporting his assessment — and that reached by some of his advisers — that the Dominican revolution was falling under Communist control.

We also know, however, that in the end it turned out to be impossible for the administration to sustain its justification, not withstanding massive efforts to drum up evi-Washington tends to compress dence — even the dispatch of scores of FBI agents to the Domincan Republic with orders to find the pieces that would fit into the prepackaged puzzle.

Misleading

Historical analogies, of course, can be highly misleading. By oo means am I arguing that the U.S. response to the Zaire situation this year is exactly like our response to the Dominican Republic crisis in 1965, nor that Jimmy Carter resem-bles Lyndoo Johnson. Far from it.

It may be useful to remind ourselves, though, how domestic pressure, international rivalries, bu-reaucratic routines, and psychological predisposicions can sometimes combine - as they did in 1965 to produce at the highest levels of government, erroneous evaluators of intelligence reports.

Northrop Realigns Effort At Washington Lobbying

And, judging from this year's lobby reports filed with the House of Representatives. Northrop is backing away from its old-style lobbyists, who gained notoriety by tak-ing Washington influentials goose-hunting on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

"The ranks of the old-fashioned here and 'good old boys.' both up here and among the lobbyists, are thinning said one longtime congressional observer of defense lobby-ing. Today's senator or congressman is more likely to want a position paper than bear a lobbyist tell him the latest dirty joke before saying what he wants.

Paid $115,000

One of Washington's most cele-brated "good old boys" in the military lobbying sel is retired Maj. Gen. Winston Wilson, former head of the National Guard Bureau at the Peotagon. Northrop paid him a total of $115,000 from 1971 to 1974, according to the Defense

Senate Appropriations Committee before going into public relations. His public-relations firm had Contract Audit Agency.

But Gen. Wilson's role with Northrop is fading, if reported earnings are a reliable indicator. Gen. Wilson, in his latest lobby report filed with the House, said Northrop paid him $5,800 for the first quarter of this year.

Northrop's new Georgia connec-tion, Mr. Paris, a retired Air Force gress and related units of the federcolonel, was appointed adjutant al government. According to the Peotagon's latest rundown of retired and former military officers on the payrolls of defense contractors, Northrop, in fiscal 1977, had 61 former military officers in its employ — triple the oumbet on the payroll of McDonnell-Douglas, the aerospace contractor that got the most defense contracts that year.

While McDonnell-Douglas ranked first in dollar awards in fis-cal 1977. Northrop ranked 10th, with $986.2 million worth of Pentagon work. Lockheed, the secondpiggest defense contractor in fiscal 1977, had 68 former military offi-

Tug-of-War in U.S. to Lure Jobs, Payrolls

Businesses Bombarded by Relocation Ads

By James P. Sterba

NEW YORK, July 18 (NYT) Cities, states and regions around the country are bomparding businessmen with enticing slogans and advertisements, in an escalating tue-of-war to attract companies, with their jobs and payrolls. Using millions of tax dollars as well as private business contributions, they have turned increasingly to advertising professionals to tell compa-

oies, in effect:

If you're somewhere else, the grass is greener over here. If you're already here, better stay because the grass is not greener over there, regardless of what the people over there are telling you.

Remember Fun City? Well, if you're a businessman, you are supposed to forget it, because "New York is finally getting down to business." Says New York State: "We're ont giving business the business any more. We're giving it a break

The Windy City? Not any more. Chicago now calls itself "Fund City," a place loaded with borrowable cash for business expansions. San Diego, meanwhile, "is zoned for SUCCESS." and Dallas/Fort Worth bas "the right attitude."

Taken For Granted

The sharp economic slowdown at the turn of the decade, with its factory closings and lengthening un-employment lines, made local politicians acutely aware that economic growth was not something they could take for granted, as many of them had in the past.

Long before that, corporations,

Rejected by The Times

The New York Times, inciden-tally, printed the above ad Feb. 28. Last month, however, it rejected an ad from the Jacksonville Area Chamber of Commerce in which the Statue of Liberty was portrayed hitchhiking south under a headline reading, "Everyone's leaving New York for the big city."

"We made it clear to them that they were perfectly free to say posi-tive things about Jacksonville, but not at the expense of New York Ciry," said Sydney Gruson, execu-tive vice president of The Times. Mr. Grusoo said that at the time the Jacksonville ad was rejected, he was not aware that The Times bad printed the New York State ad critical of Greenwich and the Sunbelt.

He called it "an oversight" that would be rectified in the future to insure consistency in the newspa-per's advertising acceptance crite-

Last year, nearly $7 millioo was spent in magazines alone, according to the Publishers Information Bureau Inc., and the number of such ads jumped 40 percent in the first three months of this year from the same period last year. Major newspapers, such as The New York Times and the Wall Street Journal; have shown similar increases.

"A lot of states have done this for a long time, but now they're all for a long time, but now they're all discovering advertising and marketing," said Martin Stern, executive vice president of Wells, Rich, Greene Inc., the advertising concern hired by New York State to develop its "getting down to business" campaign. It ran in major managings and assurances in the magazines and newspapers in the Uoited States and Europe from January through March and cost about $1 million, according to William Doyle, deputy commerce com-

The Tulsa Economic Development Committee, meanwhile, plans to spend roughly $440,000 this year to polish its image. And the Eco-nomic Development Corporation for San Diego County in February mounted a $500,000-a-year campaign, four times its old annual budget, to flin with outside compa-

The papaya leads a disorderly sexual life. Normally, some plants produce male flowers and others female flowers, which puts it in the category of "barem trees," whose cultivators usually economize precious soil hy culling superfluous males from their plantations. In the case of the papaya, male trees are thinned out as soon as their sex can be determined, to leave one male for each eight to 15 females, though one authority has so much respect for the value of the soil (or the virility of the male) that he recommends a ratio of one to 50.

Hermaphroditic trees also appear, bearing both male and female flowers, while other trees change their minds in mid-career, and shift from male to female or vice versa. Miscegenation is ram-

Archaeologists Find New Data On U.S. Indian

WALLACEBURG, Ontario, July 18 (UPI) - An archaeologist says that he has found evidence that In-dians in the lower Great Lakes region were farming nearly 1,600 years ago, or about 200 years earlier than suspected.

The discovery was made by E. Leonard Kroon of the University of Windsor on a five-acre site in Kent County near this city across the St. Clair River from Algonac, Dean Jacobs, research director of Canada's Walpole Island Indian Reserve, said that the discovery is of benefit to an ongoing effort to bolster Indian self-awareness. "We've always believed we were here from time immemorial." Mr.

37 New Issues, 515 Million DM. Set for Month

FRANKFURT, July 18 (Reuters) — New-issue activity in Deutsche-mark denominated Eurobonds will total 515 million DM in the month the sources said today, up from 330 million DM in the month ended July 12. They said the capital market subcommittee approved a calendar of seven issues.

The first of the new issues is a 75 million-DM private placement for Oesterreichische Kontrollbank. This will be followed by a 100 mil-lion-DM public issue for Chase Manbattan Overseas Banking Corp., 35 million DM for Uniroyal, 100 million DM for Nippon Steel, 75 million DM for the European Investment Bank, 65 million DM for Mitsubishi Petrochemical and 65 million DM for United Department Stores. In Zurich, bankers said the World Bank plans to float its first public offering in the Swiss market since February 1977. That issue, of 200 million Swiss francs, had to be cut in half due to lack of response.

The new issue is expected to be for 200 million francs and is likely to carry a coupon of 414 percent - the coupon level of most recent issues by supranational institutions.

Although it has not made a public issue in 18 months, the World Bank bas made private Swiss-franc placements. The latest was a 300million-franc, seven-year issue floated at par with a coupon of 4% percent. The bank is also in the process of negotiating a large issue to be denominated in DM. Officials of the bank have said they intend to concentrate much of their current borrowing in hard curren-cies due to the wide differential in

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Nissan, Toyota See Profits Up

Nissan Motor Co. said it expects profit before tax and special items in the half year ending Sept. 30 to increase from the 65.52 billion yen (about $322 million) in the preceding six months. It noted this followed declines in profit in the two previous six-month terms. Meanwhile, Toyota Motor said it ex-pects sales for the year ended June 30 to reach 2.6 trillion yen, up from 2.29 trillion yen the previous fiscal year and higher than an earlier forecast of 2.55 trillion. A company spokesman said the company appears to have maintained the same net profit in fiscal 1977 as the record 116.78 billion yen in 1976.

Grumman Sells Gulfstream Unit

A privately owned aviation company, American Jet Industries, has reached an agreement in principle to buy Grumman Corp.'s Grumman American Aviation, of Savannah, Ga., for a package of cash and stock totaling $52.5 million. The purchase of Grumman American, which makes the popular Gulfstrean business aircraft and is four times the size of American Jet, would make the Van Nuys-based firm a major competitor in the general aviation business. American Jet Industries, founded 27 years ago, specializes in converting commercial jetliners such as Convairs and Electras from passenger to cargo air-craft for airlines around the world. Grumman agreed to sell the 80 percent of Grumman American common stock it owns and three principal owners of the remaining 20 percent also have agreed to sell to

Response to Critics By Industry Group

NEW YORK, July 18 (NYT) --The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants announced yesterday a major restructuring of its operations for setting auditing standards. The move, which had been expected, was made in re-

The organization, whose 140,000 members make up the vast majority of accountants in public practice, said it was replacing its 21-member Auditing Standards Executive Committee with a 15-member re-Committee with a 15-member, ro-taing board plus a new independ-ent advisory council to monitor the board's operations.

The institute also said it was expanding its auditing standards-set-ting staff from eight to 12 and was creating two new positions — a staff vice presidency in charge of auditing and a directorship of auditing research.

Last November, a Senate subcommittee issued a unanimous report recommending that improve-ments be made in the auditing process. That report stopped short of suggesting legislation. But recently, a House commerce subcommittee proposed a bill that would create a quasi-government agency to regulate the accounting profession in the way the National Association of Securities Dealers regulates stockbrokers who deal in the overcomputer-system designers - with some replacing expensive, large computers with cheaper equipment from DEC. Ironically, it is DEC's marketing the-counter market.

By Robert J. Cole

NEW YORK, July 18 (NYT) — The New York State Banking Department, moving swiftly to curtail foreign takeovers said to be fac-ing at least two major unidentified commercial hanks, has quietly drafted new banking legislation to block such takeovers without state authority.

The legislation, requested on a rush basis by the state banking superintendent, Muriel Siebert, and supported by Gov. Hugh Carey, is expected to be made part of the State Legislature's special agenda and passed expeditiously.

"We don't anucipate we'll have any problem; it'll probably pass this week," said State Sen. Jay Rolison Jr., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

Foreign bids for control of five banks in New York state, including Arab interests seeking two of the five, are now or shortly will go be-fore the State Banking Board for approval. Under present state law, prior approval is required to be-come a bank holding company but such a holding company is defined as one that owns 10 percent or more of at least two banks. A separate provision requires advance approval for someone owning 10 percent of a single bank to vote his stock, but has no present control over its acquistion.

But under present state law, one legally acquire 10 percent of the stock of any bank in New York without the approval of the State Banking Board,

AMC Net Up 280 Percent

DETROIT, July 18 (UPI) -American Motors reported quarter-ly profits today of $6.1 million, a 280-percent increase over the year-

AMC officials attributed the strong earnings to record sales of four-wheel-drive Jeep vehicles. Pas-senger car sales lagged nearly 6 per-cent in the period.

JAKARTA, July 18 (AP-DJ) ---Lieutenant geoeral Ibou Sutowo, whose free-wheeling managerial style led Indooesia to the brink of bankruptcy in 1975, apparently has been judged free of any wrongdoing in arranging $3.3 billion in tanker cootracts while head of the country's state oil company, Pertamina.

At a oews conference in Jakarta, Indooesian attorney general, Major General Ali indicated strongly that Mr. Sutowo is not under investiga-tion for tanker contracts he negoti-ated with shipping executive Bruce Rappaport and other charterers in the late 1960s and early 1970s. The contracts, whose terms were disputed by lodonesia when Pertamina was unable to meet payments on more than $10 billion of debt and Mr. Sutowo was fired, were the focus of world-wide court battles io 1976 and 1977.

Indonesia subsequently settled its major dispute with Mr. Rappaport, although disputes over some $450 million of contracts for several more tankers remain unresolved. Mr. Ali said he considered the tanker case closed, though he ob-served that other investigations into Pertamina affairs could, theoretically, touch Mr. Sutowo.

The attorney geoeral's finding in the tanker affair came 18 mooths after Mr. Sutowo submitted an affi-devit to a New York court during the Rappaport dispute, saying that he had: signed "approximately 1,600" promissory notes totaling $1.4 billioo "without reading the terms," to provide Mr. Rappaport with collateral to stave off his creditors; obtained a $2.5-million loan from Mr. Rappaport and never re-paid it; failed to seek legally re-quired approvals from a state supervisory board before signing documents tying up Pertamina assets; and violated Iodonesian law by serving on the advisory board of a Rappaport-run bank while heading Pertamina.

In its case against Mr. Rappa-port, Indonesia argued that the contracts arranged between ship charterers and Mr. Sutowo were unfair and unauthorized and were not the outcome of "arm's length" bargaining. But later, in an interview in February, 1977. Mr. Sutowo criticized the Indonesian government for trying to get out of the taoker commitments he had arranged with Mr. Rappaport, and he blamed "bad" economic conditions for Pertamina's troubles.

A Woman of Independent Means

By Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey, Viking, 250 pp. $9.95

Reviewed by Sylvie Drake

Independent Means' comes along to marrying to marrying Rob Steed, her along to restore our faith in language and good conscience.

Nothing about it is ordinary. Essentially it is an expression of love - from a granddaughter to the grandmother whom she ncknowledges inspired the novel. It is written as a series of letters from one woman — Bess Steed Garner — to a collection of people whose lives touched her. It begins in turn-of-the-century upper-middle-class Texas and code with a final letter in June 1968 - two husbaods and

June 1968 — two husbaods and several children, grandchildren and greot-grandchildren later.

Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey, a former Dallas Morning News reporter married to playwright Oliver Hailey, has painted the portrait of a woman whose energy, intelligeoce and honesty were always in some state of honorable war with convention and constraint. Not an outvention and constraint. Not an out-and-out rebel, mind you, but a rebel of the heart who could spell "perspicacious at the age of 8 and draw up a marriage contract with a second husband in 1922, when such a thing was oeither common oor considered proper."

These singular forays into independence stemmed from two things: Bess Steed Garner's inability to lie to herelf and the very good fortune that blessed her with "independent means," thus allowing her at least a crack at self-rule. (It was

- by marrying Rob Steed, her childhood sweetheart, moving away with him from her native Honey Grove, defying her Methodist parents by joining the Episcopal Church. We follow her joy to her children, pain to Rob's early death, looeliness, anguish in the sudden loss of a young son to spinal men-ingitis and the resurrection of hope a second marriage.

Sam Gerner, however, was a dis-appointment that mellowed to appointment that mellowed to something comfortable in older age. Bess. nonetheless, was always at her been at her most combative — with Sant, with her son Andrew, her daughter Eleaoor, grappling with an almost-affair fueled by the headiness of ao Italian setting. The spirit is loyal, ardent and feisty even when the circumstances are not. This is an exceptional woman. not. This is an exceptional woman caught in an onexceptional woman caught in an onexceptional life, defying death by gentility.

Mrs. Hailey astutely knew that only in letters would Bess find the proper outlet for her candor, style, and wit. Letters are self-revelations, confessions to poesself. Thanks to confessions to poeself. Thanks to Hailey's splendid mastery of plain English, Bess illuminates the life of others as well as her own in deft articulate; cursive strokes that any lover of the language will find irresistible. How extraordinary then that this is a first novel. How for tunate for us that Mrs. Hailey is now working on a second.

Early Symbol

BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, France, July 18 (AP) — A bulldozer being used during the construction of an underground parking lot uncovered the earliest Christian symbol ever found to porthern France, the government's Service of Antiquities reported yes-

"It is the most exciting archaeo-"It changes all our coocepts of the introduction of Christianity io Northwest Europe, and it may help to pinpoint the beginning of the evangelization of Britain." The symbol, a cruciform monogram carved into a three-pound block of lead, was found on the site of barracks used by sailors of the Roman fleet that controlled the coasts of Britain.

Mr. Leman said that the Service of Antiquilies was asking the government to stop construction work on the parking lot lo permit further searches on the site.

On the diagramed deal, could North-South make any game contract? Five clubs appears to offer the best chance, and those who fancy their analytical ability should make a decision, to play or defend in five clubs. A possible defense is to lead a frump and to follow with a second trump on winning the diamond ace. This limits declarer to two ruffs in diamonds, but he can maneuver to take the two ruffs, draw trumps and surrender a diamond. The fifth diamond in the North hand is then the 11th trick for the declarer. The alternative defense is to play spades at every opportunity. The declarer plays diamonds persistently, using hearts as entries to the North hand, and eventually leads the fourth round of diamonds. East can ruff, but that will be the second and final trick for the defense since declarer can then draw trumps. If East refuses in ruff, declarer can ruff in the South hand, draw trumps and make 12 tricks.

The diagram shows the use of a Livorno diamond system, in which a one-diamond opening promises 19 high card points or more.

The subsequent hidding looks strange in print and was totally artificial. The one-spade response prontised one king and no aces.

With this information. North took a shot at six clubs. This would have been a viable contract if the South hand kad included the club jack or a fifth club, but as it was it failed by a trick after West led the diamond ace. -

Finally, Martin announced that Jackson would be suspended indefinitely for insubor-

The Team Comes First

"Nobody is bigger than this team," said Martin. "I don't remember when I've ever been so mad nt a player. I'm the manager.

Jackson reacted calmly to his suspension. "I can't win no matter what I do," he said. "I come off as a big, greedy mon-ev-maker. I'm not going to file a grievance or a suit, I've been saying nothing but 'Yes, sir,' ever since I came here. "If it was me, I would have called the player in, heard what he had to say, then ruled accordingly, Jackson continued. "Martin doesn't want me around here, so be should be happy now.

Nn Communication

"Billy hasn't spoken to me for a year and a half, so why should be talk to me now? Why should I talk to him?

"I'm not going to fight this. I've never had the summer off. I'm tired and I'm down.

Jackson defended his strategy in contiouing to bunt. "If I get it down. I'm a hero," he said. "If not, I'm a bum. I was trying to get him [Munson] into scoring position the best way I could. I've got a man, Lou Piniella, hitting 320 behind me and we've got a good chance to score and win if I move the man

Martin said the suspension would be open-ended. "He'll be reinstated when I'm ready to reinstate him." the mana-ger said. An apology from Jackson would not soothe the situation, ac-cording to Martin and Tallis.

"I don't believe in apologizing." Martin said. "I won't talk anything out with him. I'm the manager. He does what I say. I'm not getting paid $3 million. I obey my bosses' orders. They tell me what to do and

Jackson earlier called himself a "part-time player." He had been ngered over his role as a part-time designated hitter, a job assigned him by owner George Steinbrenner in a lineup shuffle after the All-Star

At Houston, Jose Cruz homered to lead off the bottom of the 11th inning to give Houston a 2-1 tri-umph over Philadelphia.

Pirates 8, Padres 7

At Pittsburgh, Manny Sanguillen's pinch-hit single scored pinch runner Ken Macha with one out in the 10th inning, enabling Pitts-burgh to rally for an 8-7 defeat of San Diego and a sweep of their three-game series.

Braves 3-4, Mets 0-7

At Atlanta, John Steams singled twice and hit his ninth bomer to drive in two runs and lead New York to a 7-4 victory over Atlanta and a split of their doubleheader. Atlanta won the first game, 3-0, when Dale Murphy hit a homer and rookie Larry McWilliams, just up from Richmood, combined with Gene Garber on a six-hitter.

Allen Finds the Weather Conspires Against Rams

By Dave Anderson

FULLERTON, Calif., July 18 "Those guys laughing out there NYT1 — In the leafy Spanish-style bother me," Allen said, annoyance tourtyard outside, the weather was warm and sunny, as it almost always is here. And in his gardenapartment suite at Cal State. Fullerton, where the Los Aogeles Rams train, the new and old coach. George Allen, talked about how this warm, sunny weather was per-haps his team's most formidable foe in its crusade to win the Super Bowl for the first time.

"In this wenther," he said, "it's more difficult to drive people." Away from this weather, when the Rams have traveled to arctic regions in the National Football league pinyoffs, they have had a history of losing. Other teams lose their cool, But the Rams lose their warm. Even in the mud of a California rainstorm last year, pro foothall's beachboys felt betrayed as they were eliminated by the Minnesora Vikings, 14-7, in a playoff opener.

That loss prompted the departure of Chuck Knox to the Buffalo Bills and the return of George Allen after an interim of seven sea-sons with the Washington Redsk ins.

In the Driver's Seat No matter what the situation, Allen does not find it difficult to drive himself.

"I've been hired to win the Super Bowl," he acknowledged, "but that doesn't create any added pressure for me. I'd put pressure on myself if I was coaching Citrus Junior Col-lege; if you don't have that inner drive, your players won't have it, your assistants won't have it." Allen has 11 assistant coaches.

"It's more difficult for me this time than when I came here before." he was saying now alluding to 1966 when he began his first term as the Rams coach. They had lost for seven, eight years then, but now they've been winning. It's more difficult oow to sell the program. But you do it with a lot of meetings and long practices. Meetings after meetings. But if Allen's intensity has bred success, then his success has bred the spread of his secrets. Six of his former assistant coaches are now NFL head coaches — Ted Marchi-broda at Balumore, Jack Pardee at Washington, Dick Vermeil at Philadelphia. Jack Patera at Seattle, Mary Levy at Kansas City, Pete McCulley at San Francisco. Four others, currently assistants elsewhere, also have been head coaches

The Frustrations of British Feminists

By Roy Reed

L ONDON (NYT) — A judge recently ruled that a Fleet Street bar called El Vino was simply being chivalrous in prohihiting women from standing at the bar with men. They can drink at tables in the rear without being jostled, he said, so El Vino's rule does not violate the Sex Discrimination Act.

The ruling caused a brief outhurst from militani feminists, bui in the larger public it caused more jocularity than outrage. One feminist said it was unfortunately true that many British women don't care about that sort of thing and rather like having drinks bought for them by chivalrous males. As if to prove her point, at El Vino on a day, about a week after the court ruling the lunch crowd included seven women - all seated demurely at the tables in the rear

Britain, the birthplace of the 19th century feminist movement, has just celebrated the 50th anniversary of women's full suffrage. But 50 years of voting have not brought equality. Britain's vigorous women's liber-ation movement lists dozen of ways in which women are still a class apart.

Women's earnings are only 65 percent as high as men's and, after a period of sharp gains, seem to have leveled off in the race to Women seldom appear on company boards and in the top executive ranks. Even in medicine, where they comprise a third of the nation's physicians, they are squeezed out of the better practices such as surgery.

Like Children

The income tax law treats women like cbildren. A husband is responsible for filling out his wife's tax return, making it impossible for her to hide any of her income from

On the other hand, a survey a few years ago found that 7 out of 10 British wives did not know how much their husbands earned. One desperate wife was hauled into court charged with forging checks on her husband's bank account to keep the household afloat. She got a suspended sentence. A British woman who marries a foreign national cannot pass on ber British citizenship to her children, while a man can. Women are forced to retire from work at age 60, men at 65. For all the obstacles in tradition and law, British women have made considerable progress in recent years. Some believe that the women's movement in Britain is now more aggressive and cohesive than the American one that inspired it.

The movement's most significant legal gain in recent times was passage of the Sex Discrimination Act by Parliament in 1975. It went into effect simultaneously with a previously passed Equal Pay Act.

Before the discrimination act, the young woman who took El Vino to court for refus-ing her service at the bar would have had no legal grounds fur complaint.

Male Strongholds

In spite of the El Vino setback, which many believe will be overturned on appeal the act bas opened many male strongholds to women. Even the notoriously men-only preserves, private clubs, have mostly opened their memberships to women, if only in re-stricted ways and just in time for the new members to see the clubs driven out of existence by economic and demographic

Lady Howe, deputy chairman of the Equal Opportunities Commission set up to enforce the pay and discrimination laws, said in an interview recently that British activists were pleased but not completely satisfied by passage of the two laws.

"They feel that sume of the job is done and now they're concerned with closing the gaps," she said.

British women, who make up 40 percent of the nation's work force, tend to be more interested in economic discrimination than other sex-related issues. There is deep resentment over imbalances in pay that remain in spite of the equal pay law, which mandates that women be paid wages equal to those paid to men who do similar work.

Companies were given five years to up-grade women's wages when the equal pay law was passed in 1970. Women then earned 54.5 percent as much as men. Under the gun, companies raised women's pay steadily during the ensuing years so that hy 1976 women's earnings were 64.3 percent of men's. But the gain last year was only 0.6

Some companies have been accused of reclassifying jobs to keep women in low-paying positions. But the greater problem seems to be that the country still has large numbers of women in traditional "women's" jobs that offer oo prospect of promotion or increases to pay.

Many British women, reared to think of themselves as dependent, do oot aspire to more responsible jobs. Girls do as well as boys in all academic subjects, but only small numbers try to get into male-dominated professions such as science and engineering.

Even those who try often find their way blocked by custom and institutional rigidity. The trade unions, for example, are overwhelmingly male oriented, and women are having difficulty getting them to make

Many militant feminists have begun to grapple with more emotiunal issues such as rape and physical abuse. As in the United States, they are working to overcome the considerable ignorance about the nature and consequences of rape.

Dependent

Following the example of other Europeans, British feminists are holding night-time demonstrations in dangerous districts to "reclaim the night." They are writing and speaking against judges who treat rape lightly and give lenient sentences for it.

Britain is taking the lead in caring for women who have been physically beaten by men. The country has about 100 refuge houses for battered women. Parliament is being pressured to provide public housing for them.

Spare Rib. Britain's leading feminist mag-azine. found that wife-beating is wide-spread. Once it was publicized, thousands of women let it be known that they had been the victims of beatings by their mates. Many had considered it normal. Britain permits abortion when health is threatened. The approval of two physicians is necessary. Parliament is under great pressure to change the law to allow women, not doctors, to decide. There is little indication the controversy will be resolved soon,

The frustrations of British feminists were pointed up in a recent court case from Sheffield. A publican refused to let a young woman play snooker in his pub, saying women ripped the table's covering with their cue sticks. The woman took him to court and won. But when she went back to the pub. he threw her out again — for swearing. She reportedly is trying to decide whether to take him to court again.

PEOPLE: Cagney and Skeuon Celebrate Birthdays Cagney and Skelton

James Cagney quietly celebrated his 79th birthday on Martha's Vineyard at a gathering at a friend's home. Cagney, whose film curser spanned 40 years, has maintained a secluded home in Chilmark Mass., on the south coast of the island since 1936. Among those at the party were his wife uf 55 years. Frances (Bill) Cagney, and his sister. Jeannie. Cagney and his wife spend about six months of the year in California, and about six months on Martha's Vineyard, Hc was reported in good health, al-though slightly disabled by a mild stroke last year. Cagney retired some 17 years ago. In 1974, he received the Life Achievement Award of the American Film Insti-

And in Reno, entertainer Red Skelton celebrated his 65th birthday vowing that "as long as I've got a breath in my body. I'm going out and try to make people laugh." Skellon has no kind words about retirement at any age. "It's all part of a plot. Young people . . . sbut elderly people off at a certain time because they're afraid our wisdom will get to them and they can't con-trol people." Skelton's 65th birthday also marks his 55th year in show business.

Once more, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada has added some spice to diplomatic behavior. Trudeau, who has been accused of using profane language in Parlia-ment and who last year performed a mock pirouette behind the back Queen Elizabeth, made what an aide called "a rude gesture" in Bonn. On the steps of the Palais Schaumberg in Bonn, where he was attending the seven-nation economic summit. Trudeau sat on the steps waiting first for Helmut Schmidt, the West German chancellor, then for President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, to take part in a picture-taking session. Apparently ex-asperated at having to wait, Tru-deau, at the end of the session, made an internationally recognized gesture at photographers, using his forearm.

In Boston, a quiet summer is being enlivened by the reaction to a decision of Mayor Kevin White to have many of the city's yellow traffic light poles repainted black. Detractors say the new color indicates the mayor's mood, and une official in the city's Traffic and Parking Department grouched, "Either the man's crazy or he's in mourning." Those who object to having some

3,500 traffic poles changed from vellow, their color for the past 30 vears, also argue that yellow has illuminating qualities that aid motorists at night. But Stephen Dunleavy White's director of public safety, whu helped persuade the mayor to make the color change, said. "Yellow is a visual eyesore." Perhaps the last word came from George Regan, White's press secretary: "The mayor thinks yellow adds nothing to the city, but he thinks hlack is classy."

Alessandro Pertini, Italy's oew resident, seems to be taking a few president, seems to be taking a few leaves from President Carter's book. It will be recalled that Carter, on taking office, made it a point to trim some of the frills off the presidency certains down the presidency, cutting down on pomp and ceremony, reducing the number of limousines used by officials and otherwise trying to give his administration a more modesi image. Now Pertini has directed hir chauffeur to stop wearing white gloves, as part of a campaign to give his presidency a "simple style," and he has also suggested but not ordered, that his drive break with tradition by not wearing a cap. There were reports that Per tini plans to cut back expenses a the Quirinale Palace by simplifying the uniforms worn by palace per sonnel and by reducing the numbe of official automobiles for stal
